About The Squire Munro Project

The Squire Munro Project is a long-term genealogical research project begun in March 2006 by Mark Conway Munro concerning the Onondaga County New York Munro family. The overall goal of the project is to extensively research the life, ancestry and descendants of the progenitor of the family – Squire Munro (1758-1835), who was the first of the line to move from Massachusetts to Central New York State and to compile this information into a comprehensive book.

In order to more effectively organize and digest the vast amounts of material involved, many smaller book projects, including this one, were formed as a precursor to the final family volume. Although these books are primarily intended to provide source material for the wider project, they can be quite enjoyable and informative on their own and may prove invaluable to future genealogists and family members alike.

In addition to researching historical records and volumes, this project relies heavily on the contributions of family records from living individuals of the various branches of the family. If you can trace your ancestry back to the Onondaga County Munro family or any other old family from the Syracuse area, please contact Mark to discover if you are a Squire Munro descendant and should contribute data to this effort.

About The Author

Mark Conway Munro, was born in Lafayette, Indiana. His interest in genealogy began in 1994 collecting, scanning and compiling various information, eventually leading to the formation of the Squire Munro Project in 2006. Today, Mark lives and works in Lewisburg, Pennsylvania, with his wife Shannon, their dog Apache and cat Fin.

Introduction

Mary Ellis Maxwell (1876-1957) founded the first free library in Camillus in 1919 and was village librarian for 38 years. She also served as the town and village historian for many years and served on the board of directors of the Onondaga Historical Association. In 1952, she published the book "Among the Hills of Camillus", a book containing a wealth of historic and genealogical information about the area in Onondaga County, NY where the Munro family prospered for generations. The material in the book was gathered by Maxwell and included information and writings by some older members of the town who shared the memories of their ancestors. One of these sections was written by my great grandfather, Philip Allen Munro (1876-1963) and focuses on the genealogy of the Munro line and allied families.

If there is a flaw to be found in the book it is with the short, four-page name index. It excludes a large number of page references for most people that are included and many people are completely missing. To aid my own genealogical research, I began creating this index to help me search the book for individuals in the Munro family. I quickly realized that I would need to include allied families for it to be useful to my project and ultimately, I decided to include every name in the entire book regardless of their relation to my project.

In some cases, I spelled out the full name of people identified with initials or included a birth date in parenthesis where these were mentioned or known by me especially to help separate members of different generations with the same name. In many cases I did neither due to uncertainty or to a lack of time, so this index should be considered far from "finished". Also, in spite of the care I took in this undertaking, this index may contain omissions and perhaps typos and other errors. I hope to return to this project in the future and improve the quality of the data and would ask that if you notice any obvious errors, please contact me through my website and I will correct them in future editions.

As stated on the title page, I am giving anyone the right to make and distribute copies of this document to anyone at no cost. Libraries and historical societies may charge a small fee in excess of their costs to further their historic preservation efforts. If you received a copy for free from someone at no cost, please consider making a small donation to a local library or historic society.

The original 1952 book was revised and reprinted in 1976 by Mary Maxwell's daughter Mary Jane Maxwell and again, as a paperback, in 1999 by Mary J. Maxwell's daughter Betty Loveland Heinze. This index is based on that 1999 edition which is available for purchase at the Maxwell Memorial Library in Camillus, NY.
